Saturn devouring his son hoya 1820 1823 part of the black paintings mixed mediaon drywall direct result of war time trauma spain canibalizong its young via war no public reception at time gound years later.

I adore it, it reminds me of how when we fall apart we try to map things and rationalize them through known stories or parables. The texture is great the illongated strokes distorting the face make it seem himan but animal something pretending to be like is to prey on us. I love how goya always has thes black backgrounds like whatever the subject is just stepped out of the darkness

Results were interesting i had to have it edit my original prompt as nothing would generate the original due to gore and nudity the prompt it created was this Create a dark, expressionist mixed-media painting, primarily oil, using the attached charcoal sketch as a guide for composition and pose. The background is black. A large, gangly humanoid figure dominates the frame, with pale blue-grey skin, warm highlights, a hunched posture, an elongated torso, a shortened and distorted left leg, and a right leg extending beyond the edge of the canvas.

Its long, spindly arms hold a smaller humanoid figure facing away from the viewer. The smaller figure has a curled posture and simplified, angular proportions. The larger figure bends toward it, creating a tense, unsettling interaction.

The larger figure's head tilts upward while its eyes stare downward at the viewer. Its eyes are bright, stark white, contrasting with its shadowed face. Frayed, tangled grey hair partially obscures its features. Its expression is difficult to read, somewhere between anguish, hunger, and unnatural concentration.

Use a restrained palette of pale blue-grey, chalky white, charcoal black, and subtle rusty red and ochre accents. Emphasize distorted anatomy, elongated limbs, sharp angular contours, rough gestural brushwork, smeared paint, and unfinished charcoal marks. Let parts of the figures dissolve into the dark background.

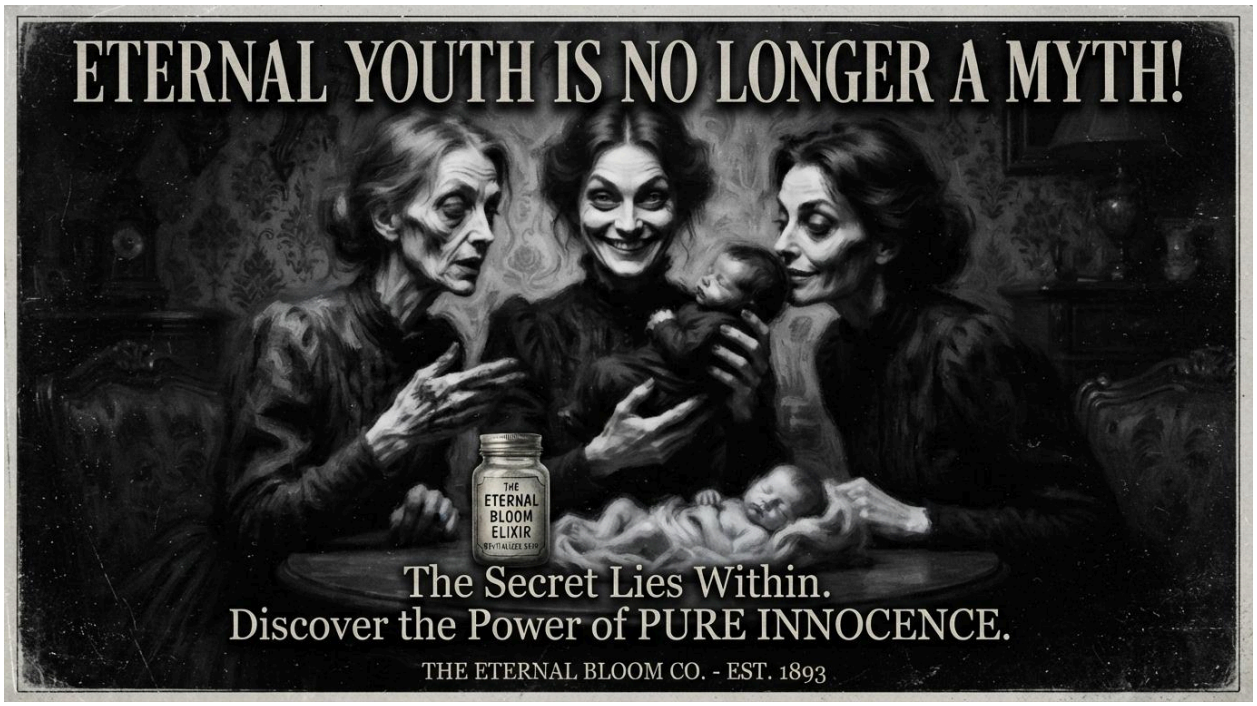

The atmosphere should be oppressive, eerie, and psychologically disturbing, evoking dark expressionist figurative painting. Preserve the raw, skeletal quality of the original sketch, with dramatic chiaroscuro, stark contrasts, and an unsettling sense of scale. The final image should look like a physical oil painting with visible texture, imperfect brushstrokes, and an intentionally rough, unfinished surface.

I found the results were interesting some felt more like gayrding the human now often made into a baby. The figure seemed more afraid of the viewer in all of these. They really lack the distortion and just rawness goyas has in goyas you feel like you walked in on something and you are next in these, saturn seems almost embarrassed you saw him. Also the variety in age was funny.

Honestly felt like ending at ths chat gpt i think the contrast between tbis and the original is fascinating. Its litteraly the antethisis of hoyas original work. Its beautifull women doting on the idea of a child of youth not even the real thing. It feels dream like. Ai litteraly forced me to snatize away any of the negative influences or context. I had to edit most of my prompts to say things like eating babies was meerly implied. Distorted women were still always beautiful. I saw that progression a bit in the beginning and thought giving less context yo ai may be interesting to see how sanitized it could become, what's a robots default of uncanny? Id say firefly gave the most control with things like aspect ratio but it was the hardest to use. The ai entirely introduced the doll form of a baby which i really liked
